City seeks developers to redo St. Michael's

By STAN BULLARD

May 23, 2005 6:01AM

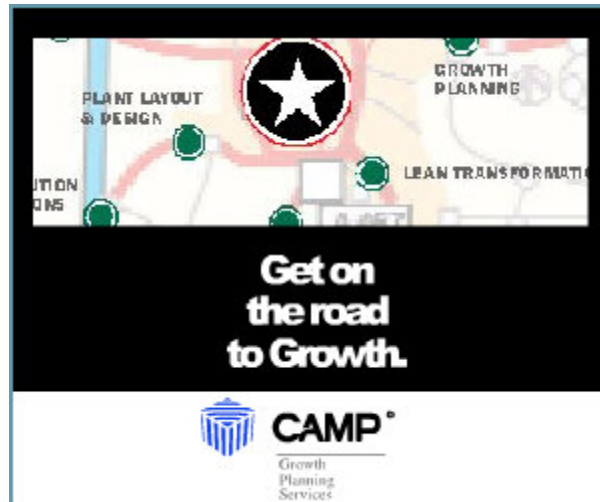

The city of Cleveland is searching for prospective developers to remake the old St. Michael's Hospital in the North Broadway neighborhood.

University Hospital Health Systems closed the complex last year and donated it to the city. An Allegro Realty Advisors study says the best use is for the city to raze the buildings and redevelop the eight-acre site as a housing, medical office and retail project.

Responses to the city's request for proposals are due June 30 at Allegro, but city officials will pick the winner.
